Death of James W. Maguire in San Francisco Saturday

When the late Timothy Guy Phelps was appointed collector of customs of San Francisco in 1890, one of his first appointments was a young man, just graduated from Santa Clara University, named James W. Maguire. Maguire passed his way on Saturday last, after a continuous service of 38 years in the appraiser's department, working his way up to an assistant to the appraiser. He was a dignified and capable official who won many friends by his uniform courtesy in his dealings with the patrons of the office.

Mrs. F. E. George of Stambaugh street, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. A. McPherson of Watsonville, left Sunday to spend several months with Mrs. McPherson's parents in Nova Scotia.

M. B. Johnson Seeks Re-election to Office

The announcement was made this week of the candidacy of Senator M. B. Johnson for re-election as state senator from this district at the August primary election. The news was received with pleasure by the many friends of the senator who feel that having a man of his calibre in the state senate is a distinct asset to this district.

Senator Johnson has worked ceaselessly for the good of his district which he has represented for 12 years, and has been instrumental in securing state aid for many of the highway projects which have done much to develop the district.

While Senator Johnson represents San Benito and Santa Cruz counties as well as San Mateo, he makes his home in this county at Montara.

Main Street Merchants May Petition For Widening Street

The widening of Main street by removing a portion of the sidewalk on each side is desired by many of the merchants on Main street, Mayor Beeger stated at the meeting of the city council Monday evening. The mayor's statement followed an inquiry by Charles Hildebrandt as to the possibility of widening the street in this manner.

"This is a subject which has been discussed for fifteen years," Mayor Beeger stated, "and at present there is a movement on foot among the merchants of Main street to have the electroliers moved back and the street made wider. No petition has been signed yet, but I believe that one will be before long."

Junior Institute Ball Players Defeat Gilmartin Printers

By JOHN RYAN

While their older brothers were losing, the newly organized Young Men's Institute Juniors of this city, defeated the Gilmartin Printers baseball team of San Francisco in a slug-fest last Sunday on the Sequoia diamond by a score of 19 to 12. The Printers possess considerable reputation among the juvenile teams of San Francisco and as a result of their decisive victory the Juniors have earned the praise of local fans.

Evenzie, who started in the box for the locals, was replaced by Haruff in the fifth, who held the visitors down while his teammates socked the apple to all corners of the lot. Besides checking the visitors' artillery Haruff connected for four hits and accounted for four runs. The city boys used three pitchers during the game.

County Body Secures Publicity in Many And Various Sources

IS VALUABLE ASSET

Secures Extension of Return Trip Time

Secretary Roscoe Wyatt of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce on Monday filed with the San Mateo County board of supervisors a summary of the accomplishments of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce to June 1, 1928. The report shows many worth-while accomplishments by that body and many that will result in beneficial advertising to this county.

The achievements of the county body are grouped in the report under eleven headings incuding: exhibits, motion picture reel publicity over radio, advertisements, ighway activities, county planning commisson, industrial motion picture advertising film conference re peninsula interests and miscellaneous.

One of the latest achievements of the county chamber of commerce and one which will be of interest to those who take advantage of the return fares offered to San Francisco by the Southern Pacific Co. is the securing from that company of an extension of time in which the return trip tickets are good from one day to two. Wyatt says:

"Supported by local Chamber of Commerce a petition was made to the Southern Pacific Company to extend the time from one to two days on the round trip special fare tickets to and from San Francisco and followed with conferences on the subject. Such an extension of time went into effect on June 1 1928.

Other matters grouped under the heading of miscellaneous are:

Co-operated with County Federation of Parent-Teachers Associations in furnishing 2000 ribbon badges bearing, "San Mateo County Tot Town Parade" to be worn [illegible] held in Oakland during May, 1927.

Authorized by the board of supervisors to supervise the work of having the County Map repaired, panted and brought up to date for exhibit purposes.

Secure reservation of space for county exhibit at no exepnse to the county, in the State Building in Expositpion Park, Los Angeles, where more than 500,000 view exhibits annually.

Formally approved House Joint Resolution No. 170 relative to the establishment of harbor, bulkhead and pierhead lines on the bayshore of San Francisco and San Mateo counties.

The county has been well represented in radio programs, for the report shows that the county chamber of commerce arranged for three publicity stories to be broad cast over Station K Y A in San Francisco on Thursday night through a number called "Week-ending with Billy and Jim," encourdagng week-end trips to see A Seven Million Dollar Bouquet in the Fields of San Mateo County, "The Deserted Village" at old Woodside Store, and "The Skyline Metuselah Redwood," and furnished a San Mateo County program over Station K Q W at San Jose on the evenings of April 30, 1928, in which was presented over 60 artists from sir communities of San Mateo county—an entire program from 9:00 to 11:30 p. m. with talented artists in a well balanced program with four short talks by Manager Wyatt on points of interest and resources of San Mateo county. Local chambers of commerce furnished transportation for the artist representatives from their communities.

In the motion picture field the report shows that the chamber of commerce arranged to have seven news reel cameramen photograph the blasting of Little Coyote Point in the construction of the San Mateo-Haywards bridge at San Mateo. All releases were given showings in coast territory and two at least were given national distributon calling attention to "world's longest vehicular bridge" under construction.

In October 1927 arranged in conjunction with the Redwood City chamber of commerce to get motion picture reels of packing and shipping of chrysanthemums near Redwood City.

Mrs. M. Walsh Dies in Menlo

By D. E. O'KEEFE

Her work finished, her ambitions satisfied and being prepared for the summons, Mrs. Margaret Walsh, widow of Martin H. Walsh, for a quarter of a century constable of the Third township, passed away at her home on El Camino Real last Sunday evening. Her death was sudden. Her passing calm and painless. She closed her tired eyes on scenes familiar to her since her girlhood.

Coming to Menlo Park from her childhood home in Scotland, with her parents in 1870, when she was six years old, Mrs. Walsh spent all her life here. She attended the first school established here, the parochial school in the Coleman tract, with Miss Honora Sullivan, sister of the late Judge Sullivan as teacher. Later Mrs. Wash went to the local grammer school making a record there as a brilliant scholar. In 1882 she married M. H. Walsh, then employed on the famous Sweeney ranch, and right out from his home in Iowa. He was a fine specimen of young manhood, athletic and ambitious. The wedding was quite an event in the annals of Menlo Parks' past.

Mrs. Walsh was the mother of sixteen children, three girls and thirteen boys, four of the latter dying in infancy. Twelve children remain to mourn a good and devoted mother. Four of her sons were in the World war, doing their best to serve the flag or their country. Mrs. Walsh aways felt a thrill of pride to know that she had raised four boys to serve the land of her adoption and fight for the starry banner to which she was devoted as was her patriotic husband.

Mrs. Walsh had a hard struggle, but she worked unceasingly and without a murmur, giving the best she had to her devoted family. She lived to see her boys and girls all raised and prospering. This was her life work and having finished it she was summoned to on high, there to enjoy the blessings of heaven which must have been so deserving of heavenly favors.

Mrs. Walsh will always live in the memory of those who knew her as a kindly woman, devoted to her family and friends and steadfast in her kindness to others.

The funeral on Wednesday was largely attended by old friends neighbors from all parts of the peninsula. After a requiem high mass in the Church of the Nativity, the remains of the noble woman were laid to rest in the family plot in Holy Cross cemetery.

The surviving chidren are: Milton H., Harry G., George B., Edwin M., Leo C., Andrew F., Joseph G., Paul I., and Peter I. Walsh; and Mrs. Mary Reynolds, Mrs. Margaret Kelly and Mrs. Ruth Banks.

Mrs. Walsh was a native of Scotland and was 64 years of age.

City to Proceed With Paving in South Redwood

Protests filed against the improvements of streets in South Redwood were overruled by a motion of the board of trustees at their regular meeting Monday evening. The streets are Hemlock, Locust and other small streets of the South Redwood District. Work will proceed with the improvement following the acceptance of bids which will be called for on July 2,

Speaker Favors County Charter For San Mateo

That San Mateo county should adopt a county charter form of government was a point stressed by E. K. Taylor, speaker before the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce at its meeting Monday. The charter form of government for a county brings to the people the control of the county instead of leaving it to the state legislators who have no direct interest in the county.

The chairman of the meeting was Elmore B. Hinman, president of the Chamber of Commerce. C. G. Lambert brought a number of important matters to the attention of the members of the chamber for action in the near future. These included the paving of Broadway as soon as it is extended. The installation of a better lighting system in the business district, the sale of central school property for business purposes, and the widening of lower Broadway and Main street.

Mrs. John Gill and two children are spending a few days with her mother and aunt in Dixon.

Mrs. Annie Bullivant of this city enjoyed a visit this week from Mr. and Mrs. William Heany and family of Livermore.

Upper Broadway Now A Blaze of Light

Upper Broadway, Redwood City's newest business district flared into a burst of illumination Wednesday evening when the new electroliers which have been installed in that district were illuminated for the first time. The new lights were installed by the merchants of the block involved to replace the smaller and less powerful type of light used in other parts of the business district. The new lights as well as being larger and more powerful than the ones which they dispace are spaced only half as far apart.

The merchants who made possible the imroved lights have given the old electroliers to the McKinley school.

Boy Gets Probation On Battery Charge

Vernon Knudson, 17, of 399 street, was ordere to keep off the street, was ordered to keep off the days and to leave the town within the meantime. The boy was found guilty yesterday by City Judge Mansfield of taking part in an attack on Tony Castro, young usher at the Sequoia theatre.

Knudson and several companions were expelled from the theatre by the manager, Otway J. Cosgrave, and Ed Coleman, the ticket taker. As Castro was going home after the show, he was attacked by the five boys, all considerably older and bigger than himself. Two of the gang were arrested by Officer Genochio and are being held in the jail awaiting trial which is to take place next Thursday. Knudson asked for an immediate trial and his case was heard yesterday.

City To Extend Parking Zones

Several streets not heretofore included in the parking limit zones of the business district in Redwood City will be included in the one hour zone if an ordinance introduced at the recent meeting of the city council is adopted. The streets included are Washington Marshall, easterly side of Winster street between Broadway and Marshall, Winslow street from the S. P. right of way to Marshall street; Broadway from S. P. right of way to highway; west side of Broadway to Arch street; northerly side of Stambaugh street from Main street to Walnut; westerly side of Hamilton street from Broadway to Marshall; southerly side of Stambaugh street from Main street 150 feet; and the northerly side of the highway from Broadway to Brewster street.

Another modification in the parking ordinance will be limiting the parking in front of the post office to ten minutes.

Sierra Morena Boulevard Suggested for Skyline Road

Of late there has been considerable newspaper discussion regarding [illegible] of the name of the [illegible] fusion arising from several other boulevards similarly named in the state. Many suggestions have been offered but thus far no popular or appropriate designation has caught the public approval or the popular sentiment.

J. L. Greer of Palo Alto, one of the earliest pioneers of the state, and who was born in the shadows of the Skyline and whose family was identified with the early history of the peninsula, suggests the name of Sierra Morena boulevard, after the name of the mountain the Skyline road traverses from San Francisco to its present terminus. The boulevard follows the ridge of the mountain that stretches from the city limits of San Francisco to Santa Cruz. The same is highly appropriate and becoming and in keeping with tradition designation of early Californians.

According to Spanish interpretation Sierra Moreana means a chain of mountains with serrated ridges of the dark type. Morena signifies brunette and hence the Spenish frequently refer to their young girls as Morenas, those of the brunette type.

The San Mateo County Board of Supervisors will no doubt have much to say in renaming this picturesque and beautiful boulevard and it is hoped they will keep in mind the name suggested by Mr. Greer.

Mrs. J. N. Winter entertained the members of her sewing club last Friday afternoon at her home on Hudson street. Her guests included Mrs. U. G. Jones, Mrs. G. McNulty and Mrs. Winters. Mrs. Mrs. T. E. Fowler, Mrs. H. Jamieson, Mrs. Burton Barteaux and Mrs. J. P. Townsend. High scores were made by Mrs Fowler, Mrs. McNuty and Mrs. Winters. Mrs. F. E. George, who left Sunday for Nova Scotia on a visit, and Mrs. Jones, who celebrated her silver wedding anniversary this week, were given presents by the club.

The collections, furthermore, were largely for the winter months and period of light travel, Riley pointed out, and the coming six months are expected to show another tremendous gain.

California has had 149 forest fires so far this summer, and of those, all but eight have been man-caused. This is according to a compilation announced last week by State Forester M. B. Pratt. Of thirty-one fires in the national forests, egiht were caused by lightning. All of the 112 fires in state-patrolled areas were man-caused. The fire situation this year is reported by Pratt as being markedly more serious than at a corresponding date last year.

A large increase in criminal and civil cases handled by the California courts and a decrease in domestic relations cases were reported last week by Grant Taylor, secretary of the California Judicial Council. Comparative figures for 1926 and 1927, respectively, follow: Civil cases, 38,856, 42,665; criminal cases, 6,057, 7,188; domestic relations cases, 8,696, 7,913. The Judiciary Council is seeking to speed up court disposal of increasing dockets.

Prohibition agents doing open patrol work on highways will be placed in uniforms within a few weeks, according to a report from Washington. Commissioner Doran said the uniforms would include caps and badges. The purpose is to make the agents easy to identify as officers and to surb a tendency of automobilists to open fire when they are stopped in the belief that they were being held up by highway men.

California cast a presidential primary election vote May 1 of 853,669 for all parties out of a total registration of 1,849,979, by far the heaviest presidential primary balloting in the state's history, Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan announced recently in making public the official totals. Declaring that the vote exceeded that of the 1924 presidential primary by 10,842. Secretary Jordan listed final returns in the contested Democratic race as follows: Alfred E. Smith, 134,471; James A. Reed, 60,004; Thomas J. Walsh, 46,770. The Republican vote for Herbert C. Hoover was 567,219.

California's new state prison for women is to be "an industrial plan reformatory, operated on a eight-hour working day basis," it was announced by Mrs. Ernst Wallace of Alhambra, chairman of the state commission on an institution for women offenders. Though she said her commission is still in the "fact finding" stages of its investigations, Mrs. Wallace declared "a crime problem, not a vice problem" is being dealth with and stated definately that the institution will not be a revival of the abandoned state industrial farm for delinquent women.

"The younger generation" may not give a whoop about things ordinarily, but 1928 isn't just an ordinary year. There's a whooping cough epidemic, for instance. The state department of public health announced a few days ago that 3,200 cases of whooping cough have been reported since January 1, indicating the disease will be more prevalent this year than at any time since 1925; when there were more than 10,000 cases.

With Roy J. Neilson, Sacramento Assemblyman, proposing to lead discussions in the next California Legislature on elimination of the automobile speed limit, Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehicles, said recently that he will fight openly and vigorously any effort to raise the limit by so much as one mile an hour. Revision upward would be, in his opinion, dangerous and unwise.

That next year will be one of exceeding importance to every Shriner in California was announced by Illustrious Potentate Philip A. Erbes of Islam Temple on his return from the recent Imperial Council of the order of Miami, Florida, where it was decided to hold the 1929 gathering at Los Angeles. So hospitably were the Pacific Coast delegations treated by the Floridians, he explained, that California's far-famed prestige as a host must be maintained in receiving and entertaining the thousands of fez-wearers from all parts of the United States who will assemble in the southern city next summer.

A rivers and harbors bill authorizing $48,500,000 to be expended on navigation improvement projects in various sections of the country was approved last week by the House Rivers and Harbors Committee. The major project in the bill is for the deepening of the Great Lakes connecting channels to a twenty-four-foot draft at an estimated cost of $29,266,400. Another project calls for expenditure of $1,248,000 for San Francisco Harbor. Other projects in the measure include: San Diego Harbor, $128,000; Richmond Harbor, California, medification of existing projects without additional cost; Suisun Bay, California; $38,000; Redwood Creek, California, $26,000; Petaluma Creek, California, $185,000; Humboldt Harbor and bay, California, $92,000.

More than 50,000 Baptists in 200 Southern California churches will be represented in the 1929 Southern California Baptist convention which will be held at Pasadena in the Calvary Baptist Church, it was announced last week. Rev. B. B. Jacques, former pastor of the Calvary Church, and at present a San Diego minister, will serve as convention president. Rev. H. L. Caldwell, present pastor of the Calvary Church, stated that delegates to next year's gathering will report on the result of "special appeals authorized by the Northern Baptist Convention for the $1,000,000 revolving fund for college work at home and the [illegible]on $1,00,000 fund for foreign field work."

There are now seven commercial air lines operating ten routes on schedule time and providing air service between points in California, some of which are interstate lines. Additional firms are also planning to enter the field as common carriers of passengers, freight, express or mail, according to the reports on aerial transportation just filed by the transportation division of the railroad commission with President Leon O. Whitsell of the commission.

Three-hour air passenger service between Los Angeles and San Francisco was inaugurated last week by the palatial trimotored Fokker cabin planes of the Western Air Express, Inc., when two ships, one lying north and the other forged a new link between the two major California cities. The two planes left their respective airports and arrived at their destinations with clock-like precision.

Forecasting possibility of cheaper summer gasoline for motorists in California, first rumblings of an impending gas war were reported in Southern California a few days ago. Officials of large oil companies denied there were any indications of a change in retail price. But authoritative observers declared that a wholesalers' war was definitely on when recent keen competition in gasoline sales culminated in a break in tank wagon prices in the south.

San Francisco will be the scene of the next state convention of the American War Mothers, it was announced last week at the close of their 1928 conclave in San Jose. An invitation extended them by Mayor Rolph, the San Francisco Convention and Tourist League and the local chapters of the organization was accepted unanimously. Mrs. Cora Cox, of Modesto, was elected State president.

A California barber must be an educated man, at least to the extent of an eighth grade schooling, R. L. Chamberlain, deputy attorney general, has informed the State Board of Barbers' Examiners. No barber "college" can be accredited which does not insist upon this prerequisite, nor can any barber from another state practice his trade without being thus qualified for his license. The board was also told barber shops must be partitioned off from other places of business, whatever their condition, before the law was passed.

Miss Ann Morrison, 23-year-old handwriting expert of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification, has stepped up to the "mike," 4,985 times during the last ten months. "Mike" meaning microscope, friends of newspaper land. Ann has broadcast the accurate identity of 239 forgers of anonymous letters and other criminals. And she has examined specimens of handwriting through which the public was bilked out of approximately $500,000. She has cleared up an average of five crimes with every handwriting identification, making a grand total of 1,195 since last July."

POULTRY

CARE OF PULLETS WHILE ON RANGE

Just "feeding the chickens" sounds simpler than the task really is, if the chickens are to be well fed. The purpose for which the flock is being kept has a great deal to do with the matter. Rations for fattening, maintenance, growth and egg production are all different, and will also be varied according to the age of the chickens.

Twenty-one kinds of chicken feeds, all of them different in their result, and all of them suited to different purposes, are exhaustively analyzed and discussed in a new bulletin by Prof. A. R. Winter of the poultry husbandry department of the Ohio State university. The bulletin, No. 63, entitled "Poultry Feeding Stuffs and Rations," has been published by the agricultural extension service of the university.

In addition to the definitions and discussions of the various feeds, there are given six formulae for rations. Two of them are "starting and growing" rations and the other four are for laying hens. Along with the formulae for the rations there are directions for making simple and efficient feeding equipment for the poultry yard.

Two special fattening rations are suggested, one for hens and the other for young birds. For hens, a ration of corn meal, 40 parts by weight, mixed with 60 parts, by weight, of liquid milk, is suggested. For the younger birds a greater variety of grains is recommended. The formula calls for a mash consisting of 59 parts of ground corn, 25 parts of wheat flour middlings, 10 parts of finely ground oats, 5 parts of meat scrap, and 1 part of salt. This mash should be mixed with enough liquid milk to make a batter that will pour fairly easily.

Egg Production Is Cut by Uncomfortable Pens

If hens could talk, they would probably say harsh things about hot, uncomfortable poultry houses.

Ohio poultrymen are urged to keep that in mind, among other things, by poultry extension specialists of the Ohio State university in their monthly letter to farm poultrymen keeping records in co-operation with the extension service.

A hot poultry house, the specialists observe, is no place for a hen either to eat or to lay eggs.

"Open the ventilators and remove the windows; make the houses cool and comfortable," writes one of the specialists, P. B. Zumbro. "Don't expect egg production if the house is as hot as a bakeoven. Hens won't stay in hot houses long enough to consume their feed."

Another point in summer care of the poultry flock:

"Summer and fall production are greatly influenced by good green feed; old dry bluegrass or dead rye is not satisfactory. Rape is the best thing to plant now for summer pasture.

"Yard off a part of the ground around the house, and plant the rape there, allowing it to get a good start. It will provide good pasture until freezing weather."

Two other practices successful poultrymen observe at this time of year are culling the slacker hens, and getting control of lice and mites on the birds.

Best Plan to Separate Cockerels and Pullets

As the flock reaches the broiler stage the roosters and pullets should be separated, for the pullets need no forcing but will make better layers if let grow along normally, with plenty of exercise. Broilers, on the other hand, should have only enough exercise for health and should be fed a fattening ration. At the final stage the broilers should be shut in a pen only moderately lighted and fed all they will eat of fine ground corn and semi-solid buttermilk. Some prefer to use a prepared fattening mash, many of which are on the market. Green or succulent feed should be fed also. Lack of exercise causes them to fatten very fast and makes tender juicy flesh.

Duck Meat Breeds

One of the most common breeds of ducks is the Pekin breed. These ducks are white or creamy white in color and are as large as any of the breeds of ducks with the exception of one. Drakes weigh eight to nine pounds and ducks weigh seven to eight pounds. In the meat class this breed is perhaps the most popular over the United States as a whole. Pekins may be mated in the proportion of one drake to every six or eight ducks.

Prevent Chick Loss

Cleanliness is highly important in the prevention of chick losses. Always scrub the brooder floor with hot lye water and let it dry before putting in baby chicks. Clean litter, free from mold and small kernels of grain should be used and changed often enough that filth does not accumulate. It is better to keep chicks partially confined, when provided with sunlight, than to let them out on old ground which may cari, disease germs and parasite eggs.

No Two Hens Alike

Every hen has its own individuality. No two are exactly alike, as nature does not furnish duplicates. Some hens quit laying when molting starts, and do not begin again until they have fully completed their new crop of feathers. Other hens continue laying right along. Some hens are cross and ever vicious while broody, and others are the reverse. Some hens have a very ragged appearance when molting, and others of the same family are seldom ragged.

Is THIRTY the Love Deadline?

Elsie Janis holds a unique place in the hearts of her countrymen. She is one of the most popular entertainers in the world. Her early successes as star of "The Belle of New York," "The Fortune Teller," "The Duchess," "The Vanderbilt Cup," "The Hoyden," and numerous other plays, were entirely eclipsed by the personal triumphs she scored when she undertook to write her own play, manage it and star in it. During the war she provided the enlisted men with such entertainment, such sparkling humor, that she endeared herself to them forever. No other entertainer during the war ever achieved such popularity or won such undying affection from the boys as did Elsie Janis. She is unmarried.

By ELSIE JANIS

I have never envied a philosopher his power to philos.

I have always thought it must be awful to know and understand everything.

The greatest moments of my life have been the ones I could not understand.

And now after reading Mr. Durant's soul startling statement that no man can love after thirty I feel a great sympathy not for all men over thirty, but for Mr. Durant.

I would like to take his hand in mine and ask him gently what happened to him when he was twenty-nine?

Or perhaps I should ask what did not happen to him that has made him choose thirty as the crucial age when all men give up loving and start lying?

Because certainly most of the men I know who are labeled great lovers are over thirty—not much over—and if they have their way it will be years before they move on from what is known as the early thirties.

Is it possible that because they don't love they know how to love so well?

I can think of three men—if I'm not too conceited—who have been on my side of thirty.

And if these men did not love or at least feel all the symptoms, then I'm ready to hand over all the palms I've been lucky enough to collect for doing imitations for that trio.

They can divide them while I, with my pride in the dust, will be heard murmuring through my sobs:

"They ain't done right by me, Maw! they was only lettin' on!"

I believe Mr. Durant really said men over thirty are incapable of falling in love.

Well! Maybe the men I have in at different times, certainly had in heart they just strolled in. I can only say that their service was satisfactory and to me, in my utter ignorance of philosophy and its "uppercuts," they seemed just as capable of being in love as if they had fallen or even been pushed into that delightful state.

Mr. Durant said by love he meant true devotion. Ah! now there's the catch, True Devotion!

The be devoted means, as I understand it, to devote one's time, attention, flowers, fruit, or what haven't you, to some one.

Certainly a man of a certain age and a more certain salary can do that better than a younger one.

But true? Now if by true, Mr. Durant means absolute fidelity, then I'll agree that he is right, only I wouldn't set any age limit.

Don't misunderstand. I do not mean that all men are unfaithful, but if it is accepted that "As a man thinketh, so is he," then I believe true devotion, though much more talked about than the dodo bird, is just about as rare.

I have been asked whether I think a woman can fall in love after thirty.

Of course, it takes the average woman so long to reach thirty that she's apt to be tired from holding out birthdays, but being one whose years have been added up by experts who remember the date of my debut as a star along with the dates of the Johnstown flood, Chicago fire, Japanese earthquake and other catastrophes, and having very little chance of doing any subtle subtracting, I am here to say that any woman who cannot fall in love after thirty ought to be psychoanalyzed, vaccinated or have her tonsils removed.

Practice makes perfect, and sometimes perfect bliss. To many women, love affairs under thirty can be classed as dress rehearsals.

We prepare for war, for golf, tennis, singing, dancing, even drinking before we become adept. Why not prepare for the thing that makes the world go round, and round, and sometimes reverse?

Very few women have the courage to rehearse without a license so they marry several men, not all at one time of course (although that would cut down rehearsal time and expenses), and eventually they reach success.

Whether they receive and give true devotion or not is another story, but they will usually assure you that they never really loved before.

Certainly after thirty both men and women demand more of love than in

LET US HAVE BETTER LIGHTS

THERE IS A MOVEMENT on foot to have Main street widened by cutting down the width of the sidewalks to some extent on each side. This will be a great improvement to this section of town, and will mean increased profits to the merchants on this street. At present it is an ordeal to drive along the street at busy hours and as for finding a place to park, that is almost impossible. This is a matter which should receive the heartiest support of the merchants of Main street.

One other great improvement should be made at the same time. The widening of the street will necessitate the moving of the electroliers. While this is being done the merchants should see to it that Main street is provided with the same type of electroliers that the merchants of upper Broadway are installing in front of their property.

The larger and better electroliers should in time be in stalled throughout the business district. But doing this when the street is being widened would save expense and would result in a great improvement to the appearance of one of our principal business streets.

To Vote a Duty

THERE HAS BECOME NOTICEABLE an alarming tendency towards apathy in public affairs, especially the selection of public officials, on the part of the citizens of this country. The percentage of eligible voters voting has shown an almost steady decline for the last two or three decades.

Statistics show that in 1836, 80 per cent of the eligible voters in the United States went to the polls and voted. In 1900 the percentage dropped off to 73; in 1908 it went down to 66 per cent, and in 1920 the President was elected by a majority of minority, since only 49 per cent exercised their privilege of franchise. In 1924, after an active "Get Out the Vote Campaign," this was raised to where the majority voted.

The approaching elections are not far off. Again it will be up to the people to decide upon the right man to occupy the highest office of our country. This privilege should not be ignored, or regarded lightly. In fact, it is not only a privilege and a right but it is a duty. Those who shirk this duty are not performing their part in the administration of the country.

Not only should every citizen vote but he should also prepare himself to vote intelligently. It has been the theory that a few could govern better than the whole. Doubtlessly this is true because that few are better prepared. Then, in this country where the administration is in charge of representatives of the people that have been selected by those people, it is essential that everyone should educate himself in the necessary qualities of a candidate, that he may judge wisely; further, that one might not be swayed too easily by the mass of propaganda that is issued pro and con by each candidate but after carefully weighing the merits and qualifications of each will be capable of forming and exercising his own opinion.

What Goes Up In Smoke

EVERY YEAR in the United States fire consumes property valued at over half a billion dollars. It is an impossibility for imagination to appreciate adequately the magnitude of such a waste. A recent news item adopts the excellent method of driving home the lesson by practical example.

With five hundred million dollars, a four hundred mile paved road could be built at a cost of $25,000 per mile, and a $5,000 house, containing $2,000 worth of furniture erected every 100 feet on both sides. Each house could have an operating fund of $2,000.

Further, it would build a $500 garage for each house and place a $2,000 automobile in each garage. And after all this was done, there would still be several millions left over that could be distributed among the occupants for spending money.

The inestimable value of practical fire prevention is well brought out by this example. It is a public and personal duty, not to be avoided. Anything we may do to help abolish fire waste will pay us large dividends, in both comfort and cash.

N. R. POWLEY

SAN FRANCISCAN COMES BACK AS PHONE MANAGER

To Have Charge of All Operations of Bell Company

A RESPONSIBILITY

Best Service Possible Is Company's Aim

N. R. Powley is "home." A former San Franciscan with a record for constructive achievement in coast telephone matters, he has returned to this part of the state with new and enlarged responsibilities—those of vice-president in charge of operations of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. He will be in charge of operations of all the Bell companies of the Pacific Coast and bordering states, serving directly under President H D. Pillsbury at San Francisco.

Mr. Powley brings to this new post a keen appreciation of the tlephone needs of central and northern California. He was with the Bay Division from 1912 until absence he has risen through the positions of commercial superintendent, division superintendent and general manager in other districts. A close knowledge of the telephone business and a close sympathy, also, for the public's vewpoint are brought to his new, responsible post.

When asked what has policy would be in the operation of the Pacific System, Mr. Powley said: "Fair play first, last, and all the time, and the finest quality of telephone service it is in us to provide. There is only one policy in the Bell System, and that is the one which has been given nationwide expression by its chief executive, Walter . Gifford." Mr. Powley pointed out the salient points of that policy, stating that there are today over 420,000 stockholders of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and no one of them owns so much as one per cent of the capital stock.

"The fact that ownership is so widespread and diffused imposes an unusual obligation on the management to see to it that the savings of these hundreds of thousands of people are secure and remain so. The fact that the responsibility for such a large part of the entire telephone service of the country rests solely upon the Bell System also imposes on the management an unusual obligation to the public to see to it that the service shall at all times be adequate, dependable and satisfactory to the user. Obviously, the only sound polcy that will meet these obligations is to continue to furnish the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost, consistent with financial safety. This policy is bound to succeed in the long run and there is no justification for acting otherwise than for the long run.

"It follows that there is not only no incentive but it would be contrary to sound policy for the management to earn speculative or large profits for distribution as 'melons' or extra dividends. On the other hand, payments to stockholders limited to reasonable regular dividends with their right, as the business requires new money from time to time to make further investments on favorable terms, are to the interest both of the telephone users and of the stockholders.

"Earnings must be sufficent to insure the best possible telephone service at all times and to assure the continued financial integrity of the business. Earnings that are less than adequate must result in something less than the best possible. Earnings in excess of these requirements must either be spent for the enlargement of the service must be reduced. This is fundamental in the policy of the management.

"The margin of safety in earnings is only a small percentage of the rate charged for service, but that we may carry out our ideals and aims it is essential that this margin be kept adequate. Cutting it too close can only result in the long run in deterioration of the service while the temporary financial benefit to the telephone user would be practically negligible.

"Our policy and purpose is to give the most telephone service and the best, at the least cost to the public."

"It is a pleasure indeed," stated Mr. Powley, "to be back home again in this growing and wonderful community. The Pacific Coast augers of a great future and every business interest has an opportunity and responsibility in playing a part in making this section the greatest commercial territory known. Beyond our Pacific shores lies a future foreign trade the possibilities of which are undreamed of today and on our eastern borders is an opportunity awaiting us for the greatest influx of population ever known. Our problem here is to work together wth a broad vision and a mutual confidence in all of our relations and not to forget our responsibilities and opportunities through lack of understanding purpose and unity."

The smooth top on the new Gas Range keeps cooking utensils clean

When you are in your kitchen you put on an apron, even if your kitchen is spotlessly clean.

Gas is a clean fuel. However, a smooth top is built into the new Gas Range to give you added cleanliness.

The smooth top protects the gas burners from food that would otherwise boil over onto the burners. For clean burners mean clean heat. The smooth top distributes heat evenly and one burner keeps several vessels boiling. It sends products of combustion up the flue.

Better Marketing Needs Caused by Increased Production

A CLEARING HOUSE

New Markets Sought to Relieve Conditions

By LAWRENCE MONFORT)
(Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, June 7—Fresh fruit growers who desire that their checks on Mother Nature's bank be not returned marked "insufficient funds" are putting them thru the California clearing house.

Desiring profits as stable as their products are perishable, growers of 95 per cent of fresh tree and vine yields this year will market by means of the price and distribution control system first worked out in 1926 for salvaging the $350,000,000 investment of raisin men, according to state agricultaural authorities.

With increases from 322,000 acres of greases of all varieties in 1919 to 662,104 acres last year, a gain of 106 per cent and corresponding gains of 74 percent in bearing tree fruits and 38 per cent n truck crops, the fresh produce shipper desiring to be in the clear financially is turning to the clearing house, it was declared today by S.-S. Rogers of the Department of Agriculture.

With pear production in 1930 forecast as 377 per cent over 1914 plums and apricots already in creased in acreage 100 percent since that year and peaches showing a 50 percent gain, the grower is facing an inevitable market problem which may leave him deep "in the red" unless he and his fellows join in a state-wide market control system, according to proponents of the clearing house plan.

So far as production increases are concerned the end is not yet, according to Rodgers, quoting department statistics showing that acreage gains of at least ten per cent may be expected in all fruit and truck crop lines within the next two years.

Tree fruit men, Rogers estimates have $1000 invested in orchards, including equipment and buildings, and $500 per acre in orchards which have not yet come into bearing. Their gross returns in 1926 totalled but $45,000,000 or 13 percent from which had to be deducted all growing costs, taxes, land values, interest, and in many cases, packing and hauling.

Attracted by the outstanding success of the clearing house plan as applied to grapes, shippers of fresh deciduous fruits will participate in the system for the first time this year. Through the Deciduous Fruit Growers Clearing House,f ruits grown in an area 800 miles long and 150 miles wide will be sent east, and while this first year will be experimental by nature, Rogers predicts success for the venture in which 20,000 growers, 500 shippers and between 3500 and 5000 receivers are concerned.

New marekts is one of the big problems whch clearing house officers must face this season and in successive years if the venture is to continue profitable. Consistent advertising will play its part, while consistent placing of cars at points where demand for fruit is heavest wil be another mportant factor. Last year approximately 230 new markets were opened in the United States in which carlots of California grapes arrived for the first time, and the clearing house committee, to quote Rogers, "feels that there are many hundreds of markets throughout the United States which should handle our fresh fruits and vegetables but are receiving none at the present time."

State Standard Fixes Content of Frozen Deserts

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, June 7—Skim milk cannot masquerade as cream under the Department of Agriculture's new doctrine as applied to frozen products. Henceforth products of the freezer made with less than 10 percent butterfat must be labeled "ice cream" and the use of fancy designations such as various "fluffs," "puddings" and "custards" will not be tolerated. The new standard requires only 2 per cent of milk fat.

AN OPEN LETTER to the 1,290.315 Depositors of the Bank of Italy

This letter is directed especially to those of our esteemed patrons who have NOT as yet made a Will--and also to those who HAVE made one and have named some friend, relative or other individual to act as Executor of their estates.

If you have not made a Will, you should go immediately to your attorney and have this vitally important document carefully drawn. This will at least insure the distribution of your estate according to your own desires.

If you have had a Will prepared, examine it carefully TODAY and see if it meets all changed conditions in your life. If it does NOT--have it brought up-to-date AT ONCE.

If you have named an INDIVIDUAL to act as your Executor, you may be jeopardizing the interests of your heirs. The most satisfactory type of Executor and Trustee can NEVER be an individual, because human beings become sick, have accidents, die, take vacations, move to other states or countries, or may even become careless, neglectful, dishonest, lazy or indifferent.

Therefore, we would suggest, for the sake of your heirs and your own peace of mind, that you substitute a corporate Executor and Trustee in place of an individual, so that an efficient and dependable administration of your affairs, after you are gone may be assured.

And may we point out that the Trust Department of the Bank of Italy is a most desirable Executor and Trustee, It offers financial responsibility, broad experience, thorough reliability, permanence, punctuality, efficiency, accuracy, safety, economy and constant availability. It is impartial and unprejudiced--yet always humanly considerate.

All the advantages of Bank of Italy trust service are obtainable at a cost no greater than the fees allowed by law to an individual acting in the same capacity; and frequently by reason of superior service the cost is actually less.

Our officers at any branch will gladly give you any desired information without placing you under the slightest obligation.

Cordially yours,
James A. Bacigalupi

SUPERVISOR POOLE BEGINS CAMPAIGN FOR RE-ELECTION

Is Well-Known Resident of Redwood City

TIME GIVEN TO WORK

For Many Years Has Served School District

Official announcement of the candidacy of Supervisor John W. Poole for re-election at the coming election was made by that official this week. Supervisor Poole was appointed by Governor C. C. Young to finish the unexpired term of the late John MacBain. Immediately following his appointment Supervisor Poole was elected as chairman of the board to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late supervisor. He was also appointed to MacBain's place on the Joint Highway Commission.

Supervisor Poole was born and raised in this county and is one of the best known residents of this section. His school days were spent in the schools of this city, and when a young man he became associated with his father in a draying and storage business, which was established by the elder Poole more than 56 years ago.

Following the death of his father, John Poole continued his drayage business. Within recent years most of the active work of the business has been taken over by his eldest son, John H. Poole, leaving to Supervisor Poole plenty of leisure time to attend to the many duties of his office. These duties he has attended to very thoroughly and gained the reputation of being an earnest and capable official.

While his appointment as supervisor marked his first advent into the political life of San Mateo county, Supervisor Poole has devoted uch time in the past years to the schools of Redwood City. He has served as trustee for the local school district for about 14 years and for the past 8 years has been president of the board.

City Council Changes Street Nomenclature

The names of two streets were changed by the city council Monday evening. The name of Phelps streets was altered to Middlefield road and Cooper street was changed to Shasta street.

The name of Middlefield road was thought better than Phelps street as it will make this thoroughfare continuous under the former. It has been Phelps street as far as the city limits and then has been Middlefield road for the remainder of its length.

Los Angeles—New direct telephone line from Los Angeles to New York is longest in the world.

OLYMPIC GAMES ARE EXPECTED TO ATTRACT NATIONS

Games to be Held in California in 1932; 20,000 Contestants

Indicating the magnitude of the Olympic games and the great variety of events which they embrace, it is estimated by the California Tenth Olympiad Association that when the games are held in California in 1932, there will be between 15,000 and 20,000 contestants and officials here in connection with them. The games will continue from seven to eight weeks.

The various competitions and sports included in the modern Olympiads make up a lengthy list. Some of them are held on the snow and ice of the mountains in winter time, such as skating skiing, hockey games and bobsleigh events, etc. Others are held off the seashore, such as yachting and rowing. There are competitions for both men and women, which include, besides those indicated, gymnastics of all standard forms, fencing, wrestling, boxing, swimming and diving, cycling, polo, track and field contests, exhibitions of national and foreign sports, shooting, horse riding, art, music and drama competitions and other events to a total of more than a hundred.

A great percentage of these are designed to prevent the charging of admission fees, but which nevertheless attract many thousands of spectators, and thus constitute an admission-free opportunity to the people. At the California Olympiad of 1932 it is planned to make the art competitions, in their various departments, the greatest of any of these games yet held.

Of the 75 requests for adoption filed, forty were from Los Angeles eight from San Francisco, five from Alameda, three from Santa Clara, two each from Contra Costa and San Diego counties, and one each from Butte, Humboldt, Imperial, Kings, Merin, Orange, Riverside, Sacramento, San Joaquin, San Mateo, Santa Barabara, Siskiyou, Tulare, Tuolumne and Yolo counties.

PERMIT REFUSED BY CITY COUNCIL

Laundry Is Classed As Industry by City Zoning Ordinance

Whether or not a laundry was a business or an industry was a question which confronted the board of trustees of Redwood City at its regular meeting Monday evening. Thomas Nelson of this city had asked previously whether a permit could be secured for a laundry building on the corner of Jefferson street and Railroad avenue.

A. M. Robertson, who owns the adjoining property sent a protest to the board, stating that the property in question was in the business zone but not in the industrial zone. Robertson maintained that a laundry was an industry and as such not entitled to a permit within the business zone of the city.

City Attorney Mansfield stated that according to his interpretation of the ordinance a laundry would be considered as an industry rather than a business. The board acted unfavorably upon the request for a laundry permit following this statement by the city attorney.

Beach Purchase Urged Upon State

By ESTO BROUGHTON
Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, June 7— The sands of the sea are numbered as far as California is concerned. Fred Stevenot, state director of natural resources, insisted today in urging the purchase of a beach south of Los Angeles by the state as part of the new park program.

"There are only 35 miles of good beaches in the entire 1000 miles of our coast line," Stevenot declared. "And in time every foot of beach land will be needed for the recreation and enjoyment of the people."

California should take immediate action to preserve the beaches for the public in the opinion of the state director, who sees them not only as scenic playgrounds, but also as financial assets in maintaining the state's large crop of tourists.

Songs of Plain Folks

By James Lewis Hays

Old Maid

She lives in a cottage, small and gray
(Down where the board walk goes);
She sits by the window every day,
And sews—and sews—and sews.

The silken dress she's sewing now
Will grace a wedding day;
The tiny suit of yellow jeans
Will help a child to play.

She has gray hair and weary eyes;
No lover, at all, folks say,
Ever kindled her spinster-heart,
Or gladdened her life, a day.

How can they know she has her loves—
Red roses in the dark,
A kitten with fur as soft as down,
A birch with a silver bark,

A dress she wore to a party once,
A toy with a broken nose—
And that is why she still can smile,
Though she sews, and sews, and sews?

MANY BOYS GOING TO Y. M. C. A. CAMP

Courses Include Diverse Subjects

Applications for Camp Yu-Mi-Ci-A boys camp near the County Memorial Park are filling the allotted number of places very rapidly. The number of reservations for places this year far exceeds those of last year at this time.

The first camp period of ten days begins June 18th and will be for boys 12 to 15 years of age. The younger boys camp period for boys 9-12 years will start July 19th.

The maximum number in each of these camp periods is 60 boys. The number is limited so that each boy can be given personal attention. The camp is run on a strictly non-military basis. The boys are made to feel that the camp is a happy family group, where each one plays his part in helpfulness and consideration for the other fellow.

The cost of the camp is $10 for ten days with no addtional fee for transportation. This added to the fact that the camp is open to any boy irrespective of whether he belongs to a Y. M. C. A. Club or any other organization is attracting many boys who have never had the opportunity of enjoying the thrill of a boys' camp.

This year there will be many new featres along the line of craft activities. Indiancraft, camp carpentry, archery craft, photography, nature study, etc., will be courses open to the boys.

The fine natural swimming hole is known as one of the finest in the peninsula country. It is admirably fitted not only for the boy who knows how to swim but also for the boy who desires to learn. Special periods are given over to beginners and expert instruction is given them.

The food at Camp Yu-Mi-Ci-A is one of the many things that has given this camp a reputation. It is not only nutritious, but it is tasty. The menues are carefully laid out ahead by those who have had many years of experience in the handling of boys in camp and the chef who prepares the food is one with a reputation in the "Y" boys' camps.

Manys boys from Redwood City have already made reservations. Others who are expecting to go are urged to get their applications in at once in order to hold a place.

Further information can be secured by calling the local Y. M. C. A. Secretary, Roy A. Hohberger at Redwood 974-J.

Tuberculosis Control Of Cattle Urged

The submission of a constitutional amendment to allow the state to slay tubercular cattle and indemnify the owners s under tentative consideration today by the State Department of Agriculture as a result of a conference with Governor Young and the other members of the gubernatorial cabinet.

The state has not gone far enough in the control of tuberculosis according to Hecke. The seriousness of this disease among milk cows and beef cattle lies in the fact it is transmittable to human beings, he declares.

"Out of an estimated 620,000 cows in the state, approximately 75,000 are tuberculin tested," Hecke says. "We can control bovine tuberculosis in from 10 to 15 years," he estimated at the council meeting, "if we have sufficient funds.

"California and Arkansas are the only states in the union which are not co-operating with the federal government in stamping out tuberculosis by paying their share of an indemnity. The federal government is prepared to contribute to pay part of the loss for cattle slaughtered on condition that the state and owner also share the expense."

At least one million dollars is now being requested by Hecke for the first biennium to launch the tubercular clean-up campaign.

Cooper street was changed to Shasta street at the request of the Shasta Water Co. which maintains a large plant on that street.

State May Open Ventura Oil Wells

Should the state government enter the oil fields is one of the governmental problems worrying state officials today with borings indicating that the Ventura State School for Girls is located on oil bearing lands.

To drill or not to drill is the question facing the State of California since oil has been found in strata in the Ventura field identical to that of the school site.

While the state is committed to the policy of conservation of oil and gas lands if the state does not develop the Ventura field there is a possibility that neighboring private wells will drain off the state's supply.

The Colfax Bookplate

SYNOPSIS

On a certain Monday morning Miss Constance Fuller, seller of rare books at Darrow's Bookshop, New York, notices that the first customer is a dignified old gentleman, who saunters into the alcove placarded "Medical Works." Peter Burton, one of the employees, amazes Constance by telling her he paid $510 at auction for an old law book containing a Colfax bookplate. Suddenly a girl's shriek of "Murder!" rings out. The elderly customer is on the floor unconscious, with his right wrist slashed. Just before the shrieking girl falls in a faint, she calls out to Peter: "Keep it! Keep it for me!" Peter's sister, Nancy, began that morning working at Darrow's. Nancy tells Constance of her elopement with Brandon Tower, an elopement which was cut short when Tower attempted to make off with Nancy's suitcase. Constance explains Darrow's card-index system to Captain Ashland, a nephew of Mr. Darrow's. They examine the book Peter paid $510 for and find the bookplate to be a forgery. Constance is asked to assist Detective Almy in his investigation of the murder of the elderly gentleman. The girl who fainted, Julia Grosvenor, turns out to be his granddaughter. She can throw no light on the mystery. Constance calls on Julia, who seems relieved when told her cry, "Keep it for me!" was not unheeded.

"I'll go on from the point where you called for help, then," said I. "I saw you enter the shop, but not again until you ran up the aisle. I was talking to Mr. Burton, who travels for us. We heard your scream; then you came running up the aisle as Mr. Burton rushed down it. You stopped short," I continued carefully, "then you stumbled—" I glanced away, for the poor girl was paler than ever and beginning to breathe hard—"and you called out, just as you fainted: 'Keep it for me!' Don't you remember that?"

She controlled herself, and nodded.

"I do now," she said quite frankly, "but you have recalled it. It was completely obliterated from my memory, no doubt by shock. It's a shock to recollect it, too."

"I'm so sorry to upset you."

"Anything's better than a gap in your memory. What . . . what did . . . people think I meant?"

She had remembered Peter, then, when she saw him in the shop, and, since Monday, had been conscious that something had happened which might menace her, yet had been quite unable to recollect what! Evidently, after all, some shock, whatever form it had taken, had affected her memory in this particular. On that point she had told the truth. I answered quickly:

"Why, nobody could tell, Miss Grosvenor, what was meant by an involuntary, half-conscious exclamation like that, and you said nothing further."

She smiled for the first time, I thought with an air of relief, and rejoined:

"I'm ever so much obliged to you for helping me to piece that recollection out. You have no idea how foolish it made me feel, being unable to remember what had happened when I was still conscious! I do appreciate your taking the time to come here to help me, when you must be so busy. I understand from Mr. Almy your work is with the rare books Darrow's is so famous for. I suppose you no sooner buy such things at Darrow's than they are all snapped right up by collectors?"

"They go pretty quickly," said I. "For instance, a few of the modern books from Judge Leavitt's have been sold already."

As Julia Grosvenor had listened to this reply with much more than mere polite interest, I risked another feeler:

"All the old books from such a collection, however, are likely to be held in reserve for special advertising, and not to go on sale for a few weeks. In this case, for instance, we should want to offer the best books to customers who we know have a special interest in Virginiana—literature relating to Virginia."

"I see. My grandfather's interest in that line was partly due to the fact that his father was a Virginian, and partly to his own acquaintance with the state."

I saw it was time for me to go; for I had given Julia Grosvenor the information she desired: first, if I had noticed her strange footgear in the shop that Monday; secondly, if she had in any way given herself away before she entirely lost consciousness; and thirdly, if Clarihew's "Notes" had yet been sold. I was pleased to have satisfied her, there was evidently so very little that could win the confidence of such a reticent nature. I would call it a day. I rose, and so did she.

"I do hope, Miss Fuller," she said sweetly, "that we may meet again in happier circumstances."

I left the solitary girl in the darkening shadows of the curious, bright-colored old drawing room. Her strange story was to remain uppermost in my thoughts, whatever my occupations in the next hours.

* * * * * * *

By Thursday afternoon I had actually got the rare-book catalogue under way. I had made a report to Mr. Almy about my Normandy terrace visit, and since then he had not called on me for anything. So I had spent Thursday morning assembling the books to be advertised, and I was now ready to write an elegant literary introduction to the catalogue.

"I shall begin," I decided, "'Without parallel in the annals of collectors' opportunities,'" and reached across the desk for one of a row of eight newly sharpened pencils. Instead, I picked up the telephone receiver. "What is it?" I inquired, answering the summons without too much enthusiasm.

A refined accent far off in the distance announced itself as Mr. Darrow. "About that . . . ah . . catalogue, Miss Fuller?"

"Yes, Mr. Darrow?"

"You know what I mean?"

"The new rare-book catalogue?"

"Ah . . . I was thinking about Clarihew's 'Notes.' . . . You know what I mean?"

"In connection with the catalogue?"

"Ah . . . possibly you might include it."

"I will do so."

"In the interest of culture we might favor the private collector above the trade."

"Yes, Mr. Darrow."

"Then about that . . . ah . . . order I sent you. . . . You know what I mean?"

"I beg your pardon?"

"Certainly you must remember! It had to do with the bookplate in that book."

"To remove it and advertise it for sale?"

"Have you not done so? Why not?"

"Because the copy for the trade Journal advertisements doesn't go out until Friday afternoon."

The rest was silence for about thirty seconds. Mr. Darrow was so anxious to be cross to somebody, disliking, as he did, to have murders in his shop, that it was simply cruel not to give him a chance. But I was obdurate; and when the thirty-first second had ticked off my wrist-watch, he remarked graciously:

"Suppose you remove it promptly and include it in the rare-book catalogue. I believe—Captain Ashland is my authority; I am not his equal as a judge—that that bookplate has rather more than common interest. . . . You know what I mean? Make sure that you advertise it as an extraordinary curiosity, a faked masterpiece of supreme historic and artistic interest and value. Thank you. . . . You have my entire confidence, Miss Fuller!"

I smiled enthusiastically and made a fluttering ejaculation, for in nine years' association with Mr. Darrow I had mastered the art.

"Not a wholly bad idea, in itself," I reflected, hanging up.

So first of all I sent for the book from Mr. Roberts' safe. When it arrived, I got out my apparatus for removing bookplates from old books, an operation I frequently performed, since a worthless book that had belonged to some interesting person might bear his valuable plate. This apparatus consisted of a small shining aluminum saucepan, which I filled with expensive bottled drinking water conveniently on tap near by; a hot-point device; and a beautiful new white sheet of blotting paper.

Having dropped the hot-point into the water, I sat contemplating the worn leather cover of Clarihew's 'Notes." I somehow, at the moment, did not exactly like the idea of separating book and bookplate; they seemed to be mysteriously united in a common purpose. I could not, however, define the purpose, nor could I well suggest to Mr. Darrow to think again. I thought about Peter, whom I had not seen since Tuesday, as he was constantly out on business; I thought about Julia Grosvenor, and still rather shook my head over her. Everything seemed dismal—No! Here was something entirely heartening outside the window . . . inside the shop Captain Ashland, rosy and cheery slammed the door in the face of the gale, shook his beautiful dripping tweed coat and hat, and made for my desk with a keen glance that took in every detail of my occupation, and a smile like sunrise.

"I say, isn't this jolly!" cried the captain. "Tea!"

"If it only were!" I groaned, ruefully regarding the steaming pot of water and the fair white blotter, which certainly created the mirage of a tea tray oasis in an afternoon desert of gloom. "What I am really supposed to be doing is to be soaking off this everlasting bookplate with this hot water."

"Orders, eh?" said the captain, affably. "Oh, you should be having tea. Why not? There's plenty more water outside."

"Yes, we have no drought—of water," I countered, realizing that any foreign visitor to these shores feelcheated if deprived of a sample of typical native humor relating to our characteristic civilization. My double barreled effort, which I admit would not go over big with the Theater guild delighted the simple-minded islander.

"You certainly should have tea," he observed. "You Americans take your business so seriously! Now, over in my shop we think we ought to know something about books, and all that—we've been going along somehow since seventeen-seventy—and yet we always knock off every afternoon for tea. Don't you think you ought to have tea?"

I felt my powers of resistance gradually leaving me; the captain was extremely purposeful, despite affable mildness. I wondered dimly how the Revolution and all that had really ever held out against the British mentality.

"It never occurred to me in the light of a duty," I began, and then suddenly it did. Captain Ashland, who plainly wanted tea, with a passion incomprehensible to those reared at soda fountains, was making a visit possibly "of a certain great importance to the house," and Mr. Darrow's confidence in me would become more entire, no doubt, if I pleased his nephew. "But now you point my duty out to me," I finished, "I see it clearly. As you suggest, it is of a patriotic character. Our Constitution forbids cruel and unusual punishments. You shall not go without your tea." Mentally I added, "And I shall delay removing that bookplate!"

"I say, am I putting you out horribly?" beamed the delighted captain. "One never drinks tea in a shop in America, does one?"

"There's precedent for it here; sixty years ago this room was a dining room." The captain looked relieved. "The water's nearly boiling. Won't you sit down, like King Alfred the Great, and watch it so it doesn't burn while I get the tea things?"

The captain informed me earnestly that King Alfred watched cakes, and that water wouldn't burn; and mounted guard while I withdrew. But at the end of the aisle I was halted by Mr. Case, in the act of bounding out of his office.

"Miss Fuller! How much of that catalogue is done?"

"All the notes. I'm just beginning to write it."

"It must be finished by noon tomorrow."

I stared, then glared.

"What kind of notice is this? It can't be done! You know I've lost the whole of this week—"

"Yes, yes—"

"And Mr. Darrow has just dumped still more work on me—"

"What's that?"

"To include and feature that book the Legal federation won't buy—"

"Clarihew's 'Notes'?"

Exasperated by the new orders and interruptions, I snapped:

"Yes. You know about it, do you Mr. Case? Then I needn't waste time explaining," when, even in the dim light filtering into the aisle between the two rear alcoves, I perceived the sudden change of expression on his face, from worry to angry amazement; I had been too abrupt. "Of course I'll do my best," I added hastily and repentantly. And if he didn't interrupt me again, most generously!

"I'm afraid I don't break bad news well! My excuse must be that it was as much of a surprise to me as to yourself. But I didn't know about your extra work."

"I shall have to think of something exciting to say about that particularly dull book; and to get rid of a bothersome bookplate in it which is some base imitation of a Colfax, Captain Ashland says." Mr. Case nodded thoughtfully, but said nothing. "Please, why the new order for the catalogue copy to be ready—good gracious!—tomorrow noon?"

"Because Mr. Gregory—the printer, you know—has just sent word that the threatened printers' strike has been called for next Thursday, unless both sides agree in the meantime. If our copy's ready tomorrow, it can be squeezed through; otherwise, we run a big risk of having no rare-book catalogue for the holiday trade."

"That would never do. But how can I possibly—"

"Oh, you can't finish single-handed. The rest of the shop force is to assist you, if necessary doing overtime; and all will be suitably recompensed for a loyalty which can be counted on to support the firm's reputation even at a sacrifice of comfort!" Mr. Case looked inscrutable as he quoted from obviously Darrow sources.

"I guess we are all human beings and willing to stand by in an emergency," I observed. "Your figure of speech means, I take it, that we'll all chaperon each other and work here all night?"

"Not quite; only till ten-thirty or eleven, since there are five of us," smiled Mr. Case. "That ought to help you pretty well, oughtn't it? And you'll have all tomorrow morning for finishing touches."

Suddenly Mr. Roberts, in a state of agitation, shot through the shipping-office door, and started for Mr. Case's private office. Then he saw us in the aisle and bore down.

"Has Mr. Case told you about the catalogue, Miss Fuller?" he demanded. "Will you get to work on it at once? I've told Miss Wilkes to send you a stenographer for the rest of the afternoon. Mr. Darrow is exceedingly concerned over this new mishap; he fears Captain Ashland will get a most unfavorable impression of the business. So do your best. Is there anything else you require?"

"I require," said I, "to have Captain Ashland removed from my desk, where he is sitting in the expectation of having angels or ravens or something bring him a cup of tea."

"What?"

"Yes. He came in and saw me heating water to remove a bookplate, and took it so hard that the kettle wasn't boiling for tea, that with that very impression that the number of untoward events which have occurred here since Monday might rather prejudice a stranger, I really didn't know what to do but to offer to make him some. Do you mind, Mr. Roberts? You know English people think the world is coming to an end if they don't have their tea; and if they do, they don't care whether it does or not."

"I believe you did right," admitted Mr. Roberts, grudgingly, while Mr Case smiled graciously, and observed that Darrow's was different, anyhow. "Ten's nonsense, of course; but it can't delay you more than a few minutes. And it's a very nasty cold, wet day."

I sped through the shipping office to the Jackson apartment beyond. Ulysses' wife, a lively person of dusky good looks, considerably younger than her husband, Maebelle by name 'pronounced as usual), was enchanted with the idea of a party and willingly lent me the makings for afternoon tea, of which I laid in a liberal supply, and also her silver-plated pot with the gilt wild roses. When I came back to my desk with these spoils, I was not astonished to see that Captain Ashland was being entertained by Mr. Roberts and Mr Case. And a little distance away stood Nancy, primly clasping her notebook and pencil. I perceived that in this emergency Miss Wilkes had selected her least experienced stenographer to send to me. Moored alongside Nancy was Dennis, the stockroom boy with a blissful and entirely vacuous smile on his face and her typewriter clasped on his stomach.

"I sent Dennis up to bring my typewriter down because Miss Wilkes said I could use yours and I knew better," began Nancy. "Put it on the little table in the corner, Dennis. Where do you want the books on the table put, Constance?"

"Well, since you consult me," I replied, possibly with slight acidity, "I suggest that you leave them where they are, for you are to begin work on them. If you please, Miss Burton, list them as follows: Title; date of publication; name of publisher; number of pages; preface, index, notes, bibliography, if any; material of binding; folio. Here is a sample form; please follow it exactly. Make two carbons, and allow a separate sheet for each book."

"Yes, ma'am," said Nancy, and crashed into her typewriter.

Ingenious Method of Ascertaining a Date

In the days when calendars were not known people had a clever way of finding the day of any fixed anniversary. The only fact you had to know was the day of the week on which New Year's came. A key sentence of 12 words was used in which one word stood for each of the 12 months. The sentence was: "At Dover dwelt George Brown, esquire, good Christopher Finch and David Friar."

Take, for example, the Fourth of July. As July is the seventh month take the first letter of the seventh word of the key sentence; that is, g; g is also the seventh letter of the alphabet. So begin with Monday, the known New Year day, and count seven days. Thus Sunday will be found to be the 1st day of July and the 4th will be the following Wednesday.

Another illustration: To find the day of the week of a birthday falling on the 7th of May. As May is the fifth month, take the first letter of the corresponding fifth word of the key sentence; that is, b; b is also the second letter of the alphabet. So begin with Monday, the known New Year's day, and count two days. Thus Tuesday will be found to be the 1st day of May and the birthday will be the following Monday.

French Census Corrected

By Presidential decree, the official population of France has been increased by 23 souls. Guide books, histories, almanacs and other informative volumes which give the population of France as 40,745,851 are in error. The figure should be 40,745,874. When the last census was taken the names of 23 inhabitants of the village of Honnecourt, near Cambrai, were carefully jotted down, and then overlooked. The fact that they had not been included in the grand total was discovered only a short time ago, whereupon the President of the republic and the minister of the interior signed a decree correcting the error.

Real Womanhood Admired

I know a woman who is naturally thoroughly feminine, and has many of those gentle qualities which make men marvel. Suffrage has changed her somewhat: she has heard about her wrongs until she believes she has some. In addition, she is a spinster, and somehow holds the men responsible for that. Still, she has frequent flashes of beautiful natural womanhood, and the men love to hang around and admire her. There is nothing the men admire so much as real womanhood; nothing they so much dislike as the new flapper type. —E. W. Howe's Monthly.

International Fishery

The catch of cod on the North American Atlantic coast has averaged 1,103,000,000 pounds yearly for the last 30 years, it is estimated. The fish is international, Newfoundland taking 40 per cent of the catch, Canada, 20 per cent; France, 17 per cent; United States, 12 per cent, and Portugal, 2 per cent.

Pearl in Every Book

There are people, it seems, who value things in proportion to the price that is put on them; and because the Bible can be bought for a few pence, or a few shillings, pass it by as a common thing. "Why should we buy your cheap little books?" scornfully asked a man in Burma. The colporteur replied: "Yes, they are cheap, only two pice a copy, but I have seen the people of Ceylon buying oysters at one pice, in the hope of finding a pearl. And here—there is a pearl in every book." It was a happy answer, and the colporteur spoke better than he knew, for the pearl is the best symbol of beauty born of pain.—Montreal Herald.

Horned Owl's Tit-Bit

A curious habit of the great horned owl is that of decapitating his victims. Frequently, only the head is eaten. One report speaks of three turkeys and several chickens beheaded by one of these owls in a single night. The bodies were uninjured.

Player of Bull Terrier Type

LITTLE has been said of Charlie Dressen, but nevertheless this little man starred at third base for the Reds last season. Critz, the sensation of 1926, was not up to the infield play of the obscure Dressen in 1927. The midget had quite some record. He played in 144 games and batted .292, right on the rim of the coveted .300 circle. He made 36 two-baggers and 10 triples and batted in 55 runs and scored 78 himself. Not bad for a third baseman who batted at the top of the lineup and who led his league in fielding with .967 and who had 40 more assists than the great Pie Traynor.

Yes, Dressen developed into considerable of a player last year, even if they did not print a lot about him in the papers. Great third basemen are nearly always as scarce in the majors as hens' teeth. Last year Traynor, Lindstrom and Dressen alone stood out in the National league and neither Traynor nor Lindstrom were up to their 1926 play. Dugan used to star in the American but his bad knee handicaps him now. They have no other outstanding third sacker in the younger circuit. At least ten of the major clubs would welcome a third baseman who could field smartly and hit .300 or better. So it can be seen that good hot corner men, when they do come through, are worth their weight in gold.

Dressen came to the Reds in the spring of 1925 from St. Paul with a sensational minor league record behind him. They looked to him to star that year in Redland. But a sore arm made him practically useless to Hendricks' team during that season.

Last year Dressen's fielding ranged from steady to brilliant, and with his bat he knocked on the door of the .300 mark that houses only the elect among the men of the majors.

But after all, the best thing about Dressen is his spirit. He is the bull terrier type, and that is the pennant type of player when all is said and done. Five out of every seven minor leaguers who fail to make the major grade lack only this game and battlesome spirit in their struggle for stardom. Dressen has it, and if that arm does not fail him he may well give the one and only Pie Traynor a battle for his third base kingship in the big leagues this coming season.

Charlie Dressen.

Greatest Natural Lover of Children in Sport

Rud Rennie, a New York baseball writer, describes Babe Ruth as the "greatest natural lover of children in sportdom."

An instance of how Ruth's sympathies were aroused by children who through illness were never able to get to a ball game, was a visit the Babe paid to a bed-ridden boy in Birmingham this spring. The father of the boy, shabbily dressed, accosted Ruth near the local park and told him how much his son admired the Babe. After the game, Ruth went out to see the boy, autographed baseballs for him and cheered him up with a lengthy stay.

Unique and Spectacular Career of Florida Boy

The early athletic career of Georgia Perrine, a Miami boy, at the University of Florida, has been both unique and spectacular. Entering school the middle of last year, Perrine promptly joined the frosh basket ball squad and won his numerals. Last fall George distinguished himself with the "Baby Gators" in football and won his first year numerals in that sport. Becoming a full-fledged sophomore in February of this year, George donned varsity basket ball togs, became regular center on the team, and was awarded his "F" at the close of the season.

Attaining a numeral, and a varsity letter, in the same year is an unprecedented achievement for an athlete at Florida, and then to top off his brilliant record, George was recently elected to captain the 1929 varsity basket ball team. Sophomores are, as a rule, seldom honored with a captaincy, and for Perrine, just a mid-sophomore to receive the election, is a distinct tribute to the ability and determination of the curly-locked Miamian.

HEENEY MODEST AND UNASSUMING

Cannot See Why He Hasn't Chance to Beat Tunney.

Shaggy as ever, modest and unassuming in the spotlight thrust upon him, Tom Heeney, New Zealand's gift to the heavyweight division, has settled down to training for his title joust with Gene Tunney in July.

Today as the accepted challenger for the heavyweight crown, a modest fortune already to his credit, and a greater one ahead, Tom was just as modest about his fighting ability as when he first came over here in the hope of earning a few dollars fighting second raters. He didn't think then that he was of title caliber. Tom still has no exalted opinion of his ability, "just a plugger," he says.

"But I can't see why I haven't an even chance to whip Tunney," the New Zealander declared. "I'm just as strong and tough as he is. Gene is no superman and we'll just be fighters in there on rather even ground when the gong rings."

Straight to the St. Nicholas "gym," a low-ceilinged training parlor for the rank and file of the "racket," Heeney hustled, "to get the kinks out." He plans to work several days, rest a few more, and work again easily until time to start the grind at a regular training camp outdors. Atlantic City probably will be chosen as the site for the final six weeks of preparation for the match, tentatively set for July 26, at the Yankee stadium.

Heeney has a feeling that he trains best indoors. He will cut outdoor work to a minimum as far as possible. If let alone, Tom would do all his work at St. Nick's, for "it was good enough for me when I started and it's good enough now." Tom trained for every fight in the winter elimination series in a room that also served as the work shop for a couple dozen preliminary fighters. From that room he went out to battle Jack Sharkey, Johnny Risko, Jimmy Maloney and Jack Delaney, all of them favorites to beat him. None of them did.

Strangely enough, neither Tunney nor Mr. Heeney ever has seen the other in action within the roped battle ground. When Gene fought Jack Dempsey in Chicago last fall, Tom was busy training for his match with Maloney. The 1926 edition of the Dempsey-Tunney series found Heeney living in London on $12.50 a week because of a dullness in the leather market. It was a case of a "long time between drinks," Tom explained.

Few Baseball Managers Develop Pitching Staffs

It is a matter of baseball record that few managers have ever been able to develop good hitting and fielding teams along with capable pitching staffs, writes H. G. Salsinger, in the Detroit News.

John J. McGraw always has teams that can hit and field but the Giants are always weak in the box, even when the pitching staff is loaded with men who were seasoned stars before they came under the McGraw leadership.

Hughie Jennings had the same hard luck with pitchers that McGraw has always had.

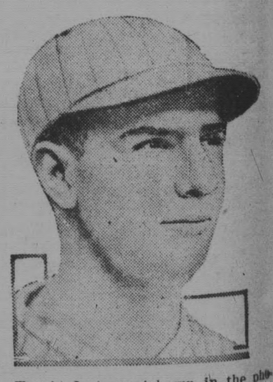
Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyn Dodgers is the best manager in the country when it comes to pitchers. No man can make a staff go further or do more with recruit material. But Robinson is weak in batting and fielding.

Rogers Hornsby to Try Farming in Refined Way

Undaunted by Babe Ruth's failure as a gentleman farmer, Rogers Hornsby said recently he had purchased an 85-acre country estate near St. Louis and planned to till the property in a refined manner during the off season. Hornsby said he paid $50,000 for the property, on which he hopes to raise fine-blooded cattle in addition to the usual crops of the gentleman farmer.

The Braves' star was warned of Babe Ruth's unsuccessful efforts on his farm at Sudbury, which he recently sold. It was also pointed out to Hornsby that the first season after the Babe took up farming his batting average and home-run total slumped alarmingly.

Greatest Shortstop



Travis Jackson (shown in the photograph), shortstop for the New York Giants, is being picked by all unprejudiced observers as the greatest shortstop of the year. A timely and extra base hitter, fine throwing arm, covers a world of ground and a wonder on double plays. Jackson came to McGraw in 1922, a raw kid from Little Rock.

Wins From Ruth

Wilcy Moore, the New York Yankees' star relief pitcher, won $300 off Babe Ruth last season and some one asked him recently what he did with it.

"I didn't spend it foolishly," Wilcy said. "I buyed me two mules for my Oklahoma farm with it and I did the right thing by the mules. I named one of 'em Babe and the other Ruth and what a kick they've got!"

Babe bet Wilcy $300 to $10 he wouldn't make three hits all season. Wilcy made six.

WHEN THE URGE IS ON

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

PRESTON is at the head of an organization whose members are not doing well. In fact they are doing very ill and bid fair, if they do not improve, to bring up at the lower end of the list of similar groups.

"What do you think is the matter with our boys?" he asks me. "They certainly aren't dumber than the other fellows; they've had just as good training, and our house is just as well suited to study as are the other houses, where the fellows are getting on much better. We would like to have good grades."

The explanation was quite easy. They didn't have the urge. They saw no especial reason for doing well. They were not pushing themselves mentally to reach any particular goal. They were not trying their best.

Most people will recall that ten years ago or so when young fellows were preparing themselves to enter the active service, how quickly they got ready. In some of the more technical branches of the service where a knowledge of mathematics and mechanics was necessary men did in three months what it would ordinarily have taken them a year or more to accomplish. They were eager to make the necessary preparation; they held their minds to the work in hand; the urge to reach a certain perfection of accomplishment was on them, and we all marveled at what they were able in a surprisingly short period to do. It was equally true in all branches of military preparation, we learned. When we push ourselves to the utmost we can go far in an amazingly short time.

The speaker at church this morning has traveled frequently in Palestine, and he was telling us of a long walk he and a companion had taken—44 miles it was in all, I believe, there and back—from Jerusalem to the supposed seat of the ancient Emmaus toward which the two disciples were trudging after the crucifixion, when Jesus joined himself to them. It was an exhausting walk through a burning sun for the most part, over roads indescribably rough and up and down hills which tried the strength and left the travelers weak. Twelve hours they were in making the journey, and they wasted no time and even rode a part of the way.

"How quickly can a native do it?" the speaker asked a friend, for he had heard something of the speed and endurance of the lithe Arabians.

"Well," his friend replied, "it depends on the situation. At a critical time when urged by necessity in half the time or less than it took you. When the urge is on, one can go fast."

Two days and a half, when mounted on camels, the speaker said, it took him and his friends to traverse the distance between Thor and Jerusalem, and yet a native on foot described the distance in 24 hours, but he, of course, was in a hurry and urged on by impending calamity.

If Preston's companions only wanted badly to do so, they could easily head the list.

Study Flying Fish

New York.—That troublesome question, "How do flying fishes fly?" is still pestering scientists, although many attempts to solve the mystery have been made.

J. T. Nichols, curator of recent fishes at the American Museum of Natural History, and C. M. Breeder, Jr., research associate of the New York aquarium, find some truth in both sides of the argument as to whether these fishes sustain their flight by flapping of the wings, or pectoral fins, or whether they merely soar as gliders.

Writing in Natural History, the museum's journal, the ichthyologists say:

"The flight is largely a planing one, but at certain times and under certain conditions a definite wing motion may enter into and contribute to it. The enlarged pectoral fins or wings are on anatomical grounds and structurally—from an engineering point of view—ideal gliding planes, so arranged as to be easily held rigid at the proper angle.

"The wings of large flying fishes are sometimes seen to vibrate or flutter, a motion more reasonably referable to tension in setting them, or to the wind, than to a definite function in flight. In very small and young fishes, on the other hand, the wings vibrate to such an extent that they blur, appearing like those of a flying insect.

"It seems that with an increase in age and size, a buzzing, beelike flight is replaced by a true soaring flight and that the former is very likely a function of absolute size as are so many larval specializations.

"Flying fishes fly more freely in a strong breeze and attain greater elevation, speed and distance than in calm weather. The conclusion is almost inevitable that they utilize the wind to some extent to lift and propel them, even though it is difficult to understand how this would be accomplished."

The observations were based on the collection of flying fishes gathered by William Beeb's Arcturus expedition.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Chalk Once Animals

Can you believe that the chalk with which you write on the blackboard or slate is made of the remains of living creatures? This is true. It is the calcium carbonate from the bodies of tiny animals that once lived in the sea. This substance drifted to the ocean bed and, piling up, formed the chalk cliffs.

Help Plants to Breathe

Are your palms spotted with scales? If so, wash the fronds with whale oil soap, says Nature Magazine. At the same time sponge the leaves of all house plants to remove accumulated dust and help them to breathe.

Street to Be Ballroom

Entertaining guests together and using the street as the ballroom is the plan being worked out by residents of one side of North street, London. Under the shadow of Westminster the neighbors of the small and ancient street have become well acquainted, and as their homes are too small for entertaining on a large scale, they propose to cover the pavement with an awning and throw open their respective houses, which will be used as places for sitting out. Dinner will be served in each house so that guests will have the choice of at least a dozen meals.

Tactfulness Rewarded

As a reward for their tactfulness during the great strike in Great Britain in 1926, policemen of Edinburgh, Scotland, are to have a recreation building. A fund for the purpose was raised by people of all ranks, most of whom were opposed to each other during the strike, and were kept in order by the police.

Put Ban on Red

Washington.—Through the ministrations of the home demonstration agents of the Department of Agriculture, farm women have put the ban on unsightly homes.

The lavish use of red paint, associated in the past with farms, is frowned upon by her field agents, says Miss Grace Frysinger, head of the home demonstration work in the Central states.

Federal employees are trying to point out to the farmers' wives that even the slightly lower price of red paint cannot make up for the landscape-blotting qualities it has.

Classes are being conducted in all the states, with the co-operation of county agents, state universities, and their departments of agriculture, in methods of beautifying the farm home, both internally and externally.

"This present campaign, we hope," Miss Frysinger says, "will result in a unity of color in the buildings, and also the clearing up of the front yards.

"Women are being shown demonstration homes, where the yard is free from the plowshare; the clothesline and the garbage pail. The model homes have neat, clean front yards, shrubbery covering unsightly outbuildings, and plenty of trees for shade. The buildings are all painted one color or at least in colors that have some relation to one another. The fences are mended and upstanding, and chickens and live stock are kept behind pens or wire fences, and are not allowed to roam generally through all parts of the yard and house."

FOR SPORTS WEAR

The newest of today's sports coats are following the trend of modern decorative themes by going in for ultra-modernistic motives at trimmings.

This extremely chic coat of white basket weave material worn by Marion Davies, in "The Patsy," her newest film, is extremely plain, with its point of interest centered in the large patch pocket appliqued in a cubist design in peasant colors.

A broad white kid belt is worn at the natural waistline.

Miss Davies carries out the modernistic decorative effect in the shoes and hat she wears with this coat. The shoes are of white kid with modernistic black stripes and black patent-leather straps. White felt fashions the close-fitting skull cap.

"The Lord's Supper"

St. Paul's account is the earliest record of the institution of the Lord's Supper by at least two or three years John D. Davis says in "A Dictionary of the Bible." "It was written probably as early as A. D. 57, just 27 years after the supper was instituted."

Rival Nurses Strive to Please Till It Hurts!

Mexico City.—Fights between ambulance crews of the Red Cross of Mexico City and the "Green Cross," rival charitable organization, each striving to outdo the other in the number of accident cases handled, have resulted in further injuries to patients already hurt and being taken to hospitals.

The Red Cross chapter complained to police that Green Cross ambulance men have attacked Red Cross ambulances bound for a hospital with accident victims. It was alleged that in some cases the injured had been forcibly removed from a Red Cross ambulance by the staff of a Green Cross car.

Police plan to assign zones to each ambulance service to prevent further trouble.

Find Greased Shoe Stays Dry and Wears

Washington.—Farmers who grease their shoes to make them last longer are following a sound scientific principle and not a "fallacy of the hinterland," the Department of Agriculture insists.

Greasing shoes, experts say, not only prolongs their life, but helps to keep the feet dry. They recommend neat's-foot, cod and castor oils, tallow and wool grease or mixtures of these.

Shoes worn on the farm get particularly hard wear, since they are subjected to mud and water and at times to extreme dryness. All these, it is observed, ruin leather, whereas oil and grease preserve it.

Back Seat Driving Is Not Divorce Ground

Des Moines, Iowa.—Back seat driving by a husband is insufficient evidence for the granting of a divorce, Judge J. E. Meyer in Polk County District court ruled in dismissing a divorce petition filed by Mrs. Blanche Lowenberg, wife of Judson Lowenberg, Iowa grand master of the Ancient Order of United Workers. Mrs. Lowenberg testified that her husband found continual fault with her driving.

How Much Water Should Baby Get?

A Famous Authority's Rule

By Ruth Brittain

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight-pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast-fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle-fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

Just a word of caution. Look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package so you'll be sure to get the genuine. The forty-cent bottles contain thirty-five doses.

Poetry on Production Basis

Two high school boys called on William Herschell, poet of the Indianapolis News, asking him to honor their yearbook with a poetical introduction.

"Why, yes, boys, I'd be glad to write a little verse or two for your annual. When do you want it?"

"Oh," replied the boys, "we'll just sit here and wait for it."

Safe Guess

"How much do you think I made last year?"

"About 50 per cent."

"Fifty per cent of what?"

"Whatever you say."

Importance of Women as Bank Depositors

For more than a century and a half the savings bank has been conducted by men and largely for men. Lately many of the conservative directors of savings banks in the United States awoke to the fact that more than half of the depositors in these institutions are women.

Up to that time, only half a decade ago, little or nothing had been done to cater to the growing army of women patrons. Even today only a small percentage of our savings bank officials know the relative proportions of their male and female depositors. The officials of one of the largest savings banks in this country, having 200,000 depositors, recently learned that 75 per cent of their accounts are handled by women, either in their own right or for some other member of the family.—Thrift Magazine.

His Excuse

"What is coming off?" asked a stranger in Petunia. "I just saw an old fellow come rushing around a corner, run to the fire bell and ring it like mad. What do you suppose was the matter with him?"

"That was old Bill Bachelor," replied Constable Slackputter. "Somebody told me the Widder Huggins, who wants to talk all the time about her late husband, cornered Bill and proposed to him. I reckon that was excuse enough for his actions."—Kansas City Star.

Perfect Crystal Orb

Washington.—Resting on its circular base, the world's most perfect crystal stands ready to reveal whatever secrets of the future may be desired. Appropriately enough, this rare globe of glass, nearly 14 inches in diameter and weighing 110 pounds, is in Washington's National museum.

To this perfect orb come thousands to gaze, and, if possible, obtain a message from the mystic future or a warning based on events of the past. Here, too, might be found the answer to political hopes and legislative ambitions.

The largest crystal ball in the world, guarded closely, came originally from China, where it was said to possess mystic powers and unusual accuracy in foretelling the future.

Two hundred years ago Emperor Chieng Lung received a massive block of crystal, mined in ancient Burma. It must have weighed a thousand pounds, and been at least four feet square.

The emperor gave orders that the mass be used to make a crystal ball of the largest possible size. To do this the most skillful craftsman of the old empire was chosen. This took more than a year of effort. It was then taken to Japan for repolishing. This work consumed about six months under Japanese artisans, the most skillful known in this work. The crystal, then in all its luster and scintillating brilliance, was given to the emperor, and it was one of his most valued possessions.

It is said that, for special service, a mandarin was told that he might have any wish fulfilled and the reward chosen was the great crystal. For almost two centuries it remained in the possession of the mandarin's descendants, until financial troubles compelled its sale.

It is not hard to imagine the hands, both wrinkled and smooth, that have caressed this polished surface. What hands have drawn back, as eyes have seen mirrored the events of the future! All the mysticism and hypnotic power ascribed to crystals in all ages and all countries leaps to the imagination as one gazes on this perfect specimen.

Long, long ago, in China, it is said, the crystal ball was found in a dragon's lair. The emperor of that early period, gazing into the ball, saw reflected the spirits of his bygone ancestors, praising and glorifying him for releasing them from control of the dreaded dragon.

Thus, it is believed in the Orient that the crystal ball is the abiding place of one's ancestors. It is believed to possess the power of foretelling evil, since any evil spirit entering the house will first attempt to hide in the ball. When trouble impends, the ball is placed at night outside the home. The cold morning dew clouds and dulls the luster. Carefully, then, and gently the surface is rubbed, and, if the dew vanishes and the ball is restored to perfect purity, the evil has been vanquished; if not—woe betide.

Crystal gazing has long appealed to humanity. Congressmen are not the only illustrious persons who find solace and comfort in its visions. Roger Bacon has told in his writings of the crystals possessed by the friars in which events happening at far distant places were mirrored.

To Raise $25,000

The gramamr school trustees have called a bond election for July 3 to raise $25,000 to make additions to the central school and to improve the grounds of both local schools. An addition of three rooms is planned for the local institution, while a certain sum is to be used in putting new lawns and otherwise beautifying the landscape. The grounds around the Fremont school will also be improved with funds secured from the bond electon. The bonds are for a period of ten years. The money is needed. It will be up to the voters to furnish it by carrying the bond election. This money will supply the present needs but in time a much larger school and a new site will have to be provided. This is a fast-growing community with crowded schools and provisions will have to be made for the education of the youth of the locality.

The Forty Hours' Devotion began on that day and will continue until tomorrow during which time there will be perpetual adoration of the Blessed Sacrament. Hundreds will inspect the big building during this time and no doubt will be impressed with its wonderful interor arrangement.

Council Meeting

All members of the council were present at the regular meeting last Tuesday evening. The councilmen spent considerable of the evening in discussing several ordinances, many of which were adopted, and others went over until the next meeting. The emergency zoning ordinance districting a portion of the city into business area was adopted.

This is what the people of Menlo Park have been looking for and expecting for some time. The planning commission will now work along the lines set forth in the new law which gives protection to all property owners in the city and which assures the community that the day of the old shack is doomed.

When the council convened Councilman Dale arose and moved that proper resolutions of condolence be drafted and spread upon the minutes and copy be sent to the family of Mrs. Martin Walsh, who passed away on Sunday night last, and who was a pioneer of Menlo Park.

Dr. W. H. Zieber, the health officer, reported to the board that two families had failed to connect with the sewer and recommended that these parties be made to connect with the sewer at once. He suggested that thistles growing on the sidewalks be removed as they might be the cause of blood poisoning and the city might be liable for damages.

Treasurer Ryan made application for a raise in salary. City Attorney Whitworth explained that such a thing was impossible and in order to secure the increase Ryan would have to resign and be reappointed by the council as he could not be raised during his term of office. On motion the application was laid over until the next meeting.

Fred Metcalf, chairman of the planning commission reported that the members were making a survey of the city and preparing a map showing the business section and residential area and same would be ready by the next meeting of the council.

Building Inspector Smith reported that he had issued permits amounting to $16,350 during the month. Councilman Walker of the building committee peresented plans and specifications from Mr. Buckman and Mr. Dimmick and on motion both were rejected as they were not according to the building laws.

Treasurer Ryan reported money in his hands as follows:

Money on hand at last report, $1,059.72, May receipts, $ 49.50, expenditures $350, leaving a balance of $1558.72. Balance on hand June 5, $2422.47.

The plumbing ordinance fixing rate of fees, etc. was adopted. The electrical ordinance was read and after discussion was deferred until next meeting. The weed ordinance, read at the ast meeting, was adopted. The health ordinance, regulating nuisances, etc., was adopted. The temporary zoning ordinance was read and fully discussed before its passage. It was passed on motion of Ellis, seconded by Blake. On otion certain sectons of the license ordinance was amended and will be effective on July 1. The ordinance fixing the powers and salary of the chief of police was amended permitting the chief to appoint six deputies and setting aside a contingent fund of $100 to be used in connection with his office.

At the suggestion of Chief Furman and on motion of Blake seconded by Ellis the city attorney was authorized to draft an ordinance regulating dances and public picnics in the city. According to the proposed law all dances must close at one o'clock and a permit must be secured at a price of $2.50 until 12 o'clock and from that until one o'clock another $2.50 must be paid. An officer in uniform will be at the dances at the expense of the promotorers. Public picnics will be similarly charged. The council adjourned to meet on June 19.

Y. M. I. BASEBALL TEAM DEFEATED

Hard Fought Game Ends With Visitors Score Leading 5 to 2

By JOHN RYAN

The winning stride of the Redwood Council, Young Men's Institure baseball team was cracked in the terriffic heat of last Sunday afternoon by the J. B. Maher Paint Company's team of San Francisco, on the Sequoia diamond. When the smoke of battle had cleared away the visitors were on the long end of a 5 to 2 score.

Considering the class of the opposition, who were class C, midwinter league champs in San Francisco, and minus the services of two regulars, the local outfit made a creditable showing.

Pitcher "Tick" Hallet on the mound for the institute, held the city boys scoreless for three frames before he wilted, and as "Tick" gradually gave way his team-mates began dropping the ball and committing various and sundry other errors in the pinches. Hallett retired but three opposing batsmen, while Bonetti, opposing chucker, managed to send back five via the whiff route.

Redwood City scored in the first inning when Stevens, lead-off man, connected for a bingle. Bartoimei advanced him to third on a sacrifice hit, and while Joe Britschgi was whiffing the ozone, Stevens sneaked home.

Three innings elapsed before the Painters broke into the score column. Courtney, first man up, singled and Evans bunted him to second; Rotbert drove Evans home with a single.

The home talent staged a brief rally in the last half of the fourth which netted one run. "Hawk" Herm made the only hit of the inning, but it sent him past three bags, and he had an easy time reaching home while Bill Brooks was slicing the atmosphere.

After this brief threat Manager Bullivant's playboys withdrew their fire while the enemy bagged four more runs—three in the sixth and one in the seventh.

"Brick" Allain, in the short patch for the locals, made a beautiful swan dive after Rotbert's sock, but in vain, and a result, two tallies crossed the platter. Gaboni singled to bring in the third run.

Two more bingles finished the day's festivities in the seventh round. The last two innings were played in a rush, but twelve batters were up for both sides.

Manager Bullivant has sounded the gong for strenuous practice for his Pastimers during the week in preparation for next Sunday afternoon, when his team locks horns with another San Francisco semi-pro outfit.
